

WAR MACHINE OF JAPAN PILES UP MORE TRIUMPHS

Strikes Like Lightning On The Shanghai Front and In North and South China

TENSION IS INCREASED

Relentlessly Advancing Nipponese Forces Control Chapei Region

SHANGHAI, Oct. 27.—(INS).—Japan's mighty war machine struck like lightning on the Shanghai front and in North and South China today, adding triumph to triumph in fierce warfare that gravely increased international tension over the struggle in the Far East.

In Shanghai, relentlessly advancing Nipponese forces gained control of the ruined and flaming Chapei region. Chinese defense stronghold which the invaders had tried for two months to occupy.

In North China the vitally important Niangtzekuan Pass, on the border between Hopei and Shansi provinces, fell before the Japanese onslaught, clearing the way for the Japanese drive on the northern Chinese military base at Taiyuanfu.

Far to the south, ten Japanese warships began a slashing attack by shelling the great port of Amoy. Chinese officials feared Japanese forces would land there. Tension in the city was reported high.

Following the bombardment, Quemoy Island at the entrance of Amoy was occupied by Japanese troops during the afternoon.

With Chinese defenses in the Shanghai sector crumbling rapidly, British military authorities in the International Settlement sprang into action.

Fearing the retreating Chinese, abandoning Chapei, would pivot toward the Settlement's western boundary, British officials ordered residents west of Edinburgh road to prepare to evacuate.

A Chinese spokesman indicated that the general retreat under way here does not mean the Chinese will quit fighting.

"The war is by no means over," he declared. "Loss of Chapei is only a phase of the hostilities. We are going to keep on fighting just as stoutly as ever."

HITLER PLANS RETURN VISIT TO MUSSOLINI

Trip is Expected to Coincide With Insurgent Victory in Spain

MAY BE DELAYED

By Frank Gervasi
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ROME, Oct. 27.—(INS).—Official sources revealed today Adolf Hitler will reciprocate Benito Mussolini's historic visit to Berlin some time next Spring.

The exact date has not yet been established but it was believed the third—and perhaps most important—of the elaborate Hitler-Mussolini "chats," which began in 1934 at Venice, will take place either late in May or early in June.

A convenient and appropriate date for the Hitler visit, Fascist authorities admit, would be May ninth, anniversary of the proclamation of the foundation of the Second Roman Empire. There is no indication, however, the visit will occur at that time, at least not at present.

When Hitler's acceptance of Mussolini's invitation to come to Rome was made known in Munich recently, it was indicated Der Fuehrer would make the trip some time in December or January. This was to have coincided with a "... total Fascist victory in Spain ..."

As autumn rains began earlier in Spain than anticipated and prospects of mopping up the situation quickly diminished, the later date for the triumphal visit of Hitler to Italy—his second—was tentatively set.

Italians, however, are puzzled as to how they can possibly outdo, or even match the splendor of the welcome given Mussolini in Germany, a welcome unprecedented in lavishment and display in the history of Berlin.

Not even Imperial Russia's Czar, or King George and Queen Mary were received with pomp and ceremony—and police details—that marked Mussolini's recent visit to Munich and Berlin, a visit that has committed Italian Fascism and German Nazi-Socialists to march together along difficult diplomatic paths against any and all opposition.

Some thought is being given by those detailed with the organization and financing of "welcomes" to visiting notables to staging a vast colonial pageant for Hitler's benefit.

Rome is not conveniently laid out geographically to permit massing of millions along ceremonial routes. Rome has no Unter Den Linden—but then again, Italians argue, Berlin hasn't a Coliseum, nor any of the impressive, towering monuments of present and past glory that line the Via del Impero, the Street of Empire.

To do Hitler proper homage it is almost certain Italy will bring native divisions from Libya and Ethiopia, Askaris, Meharis on camels, Spahis with white prancing horses, and legions of turbaned Somalis.

Colonial-minded Hitler will appreciate such a show.

Already, humorous-minded Italians are joking about how envious Hitler would be of such a display, and some go even so far as to say, jokingly of course, that after viewing such a colonial pageant as the Italians could stage, the Nazi chief will go to war to get back Germany's colonies!

There is an unmistakable overtone of seriousness in the comments of the street-corner wits which fits well with the well-known fact Mussolini is backing wholeheartedly Hitler's colonial dreams.

Hallowe'en Party Occurs In Basement of Home

Richard Potts, Maple Beach, entertained friends at a Hallowe'en party, Friday evening. The evening was enjoyed playing Hallowe'en games. Prizes were awarded. Dolores Klug entertained by dancing. Refreshments were served. The party was held in the basement of the home, and the ceiling was decorated with autumn leaves.

Each girl received a small parasol attached to a basket of candy. Each boy was given a football, attached to a basket of candy.

Those present: Robert Roper, Edith Louise Wiedeman, Herbert Yates, Dolores Klug, Paul Kilian, Shirley Mills.

EXPERIENCE A BIG ASSET

In a speech made in Washington, D. C., on Washington's birthday, in 1832, Daniel Webster said: "A true friend of his country loves her friends and benefactors and thinks it no degradation to commend and commemorate them." Of course, he was referring to Washington, who gave eight years of his life in fighting a war for independence; and eight more years while president, which he devoted to establishing his country upon a sound economic basis.

The words of Webster are fraught with the same force and meaning when applied to our own community today, that they were over a hundred years ago, when applied to the then young American nation. "A true friend of our community loves her friends and benefactors and thinks it no degradation to commend and commemorate them."

Men are elected to public office, they serve without remuneration, and give years out of their busy lives to promote the interests of the Borough. As the years pass they become more and more familiar with the work which has been entrusted to them by the taxpayers. Each year increases the value of their services. From knowledge gained through years of practical experience and careful management of the Borough's finances, they are able to make payments regularly to reduce the bonded debt, to make extensive improvements to the water and sewage systems, repair streets and highways and to bring other accomplishments to a satisfactory consummation without the necessity of increasing taxes.

But what reward do these friends and benefactors of the Borough get for their unselfish interest in the town's affairs? In many instances, instead of appreciation and commendation, they receive censure and condemnation. After years of service, when each year adds to the value of their work, we often hear the cry, "put the old fogies out."

The successful operation of a municipality like Bristol, is in itself a big business undertaking. The assets of the Borough total over $2,000,000. The bonded debt is around $250,000. Each year the finance committee must set aside about $30,000 to pay the interest on the bonded debt and cancel the bonds that become due. The balance of the taxes must be allocated to the different funds used to improve the streets, maintain the healthfulness of the community and employ an adequate police and fire department. The profits from the Municipal Waterworks must be wisely used to maintain its filtration plant at the highest level of efficiency and to make extensions to and renew its pipe lines when necessary.

When the taxpayer understands that the municipality with its assets of over $2,000,000 is one of the highest capitalized businesses in the community, they must know and realize the importance of placing men in charge who have the required business ability and experience. Business ability is acquired only through years of experience, and it naturally follows that

PHEASANT FLIES INTO ROOM THROUGH WINDOW

Morrisville Woman Calls Her Neighbor, Who Catches Bird And Then Releases It

BOROUGH HAPPENINGS

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 27.—Rebecca Smith, who resides with her brother, John, at 147 North Delmore avenue, had an unexpected visitor at her home Friday.

Momentarily leaving the second-story front bedroom in which she was attending household chores, Miss Smith heard a crash in the room. Thinking she had laid something in a precarious position, she returned to find a large pheasant in the room. It had broken through the window pane and was flying desperately about the room.

Miss Smith called a neighbor, William Mason, Sr., of 157 North Delmore avenue, who caught the trapped bird and released it. Despite the shattering of glass, the pheasant didn't suffer any ill effects.

The only regret Miss Smith probably has is that it didn't come the right time for the visit, as pheasant season opens November 1.

Many complaints are being made about the deplorable condition of East Bridge street between Pennsylvania avenue and Delmore avenue, which during the past week has become almost impassable at places. Motorists passing through have threatened to report the matter to the State Highway Department, since this is a State highway and one of the most traveled in the East.

The roadway is especially bad between the old trolley rails. For a number of years the State has had employees of the Highway Department keep the holes filled with tar and stones but about a week ago it was reported here the State has ceased to make the repairs.

Edward V. Bernard, 22 Albany, N. Y., reached the end of a long-distance licenseless trip this morning, when he was hailed before Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan, in Morrisville, by Borough Officer Andrew Thompson and Bridge Officer Gray, stationed at the lower Delaware River bridge, on a charge of crossing the white line while passing a car on the approach and it was discovered that he possessed no driver's card. He told the court that he had driven from Albany to Florida, and was on his way back home when he

He was nominated in the September Primary, and hence will be a candidate to succeed himself in the election on November 2nd. He

POTATO CROP GOOD IN BUCKS COUNTY

Growing Conditions Very Favorable, States Head of Potato Growers' Ass'n

DEVELOP NEW VARIETY

According to Walter S. Bishop, "Harmony Hill Farm," Doylestown township, president of the Pennsylvania Potato Growers' Association, there will be no shortage of potatoes this season and the prices will be quite moderate.

Mr. Bishop made this statement when he announced this week that the potato crop as a whole in this part of the State had been quite good. The potatoes, he said, have been of good quality and they have been running true to type. The growing conditions during the past Summer have been very good with the result that the yield this season was better than usual.

The best results, Mr. Bishop stated, have been found with the Rural Russets. Dr. E. L. Nixon, a potato specialist at State College, recently has developed a new variety, "The Nittany," which can be propagated in this State without any difficulty and there is a likelihood that eventually it will replace the Old Cobble. Dr. Nixon has also been experimenting on another late variety which may replace the Rural Russet. As yet the name of this potato has not been made known.

It has been announced that the average potato yield in Bucks county during the past season was about 250 bushels to the acre and some farmers raised as high as 457 bushels to the acre. Quite a number of farmers in House circle—there can be found men, justly apprehensive about conditions and with cause to doubt both the soundness of our one-man government and the wisdom of the man, who freely admit it. Hence, the proposal to hold a Republican convention next spring for the purpose of equipping that party with a set of sound and understandable principles ought to be welcomed by all citizens who feel that a continuance of unrestrained New Dealism is bound to end in general disaster.

APPARENTLY the National Committee, which meets next month, will issue the call for this convention, which makes it harder to reconcile with reason the transparent efforts of certain Republican politicians to sabotage it in advance.

LUNCHES WITH SUP'T

Accompanied by Dr. J. H. Kelly; Miss Kugler At Opportunity Classes

Officials of Bristol public schools were honored yesterday in having as their guests a trio prominent in state educational affairs.

Two of the guests, Dr. Lester K. Ade, superintendent of public instruction, State of Pennsylvania, and Dr. J. Herbert Kelly, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, flew from Lewisburg to the Silver Star Airport, near Langhorne, at which point Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of Bristol public schools, met them.

The object of Dr. Ade's trip to Bristol, made by airplane between two lecture periods, was to visit the schools and learn what particular program has been outlined for advance of the schools.

Dr. Ade and Dr. Kelly were guests of Mr. Snyder at luncheon. Dr. Ade and Mr. Snyder went over the program for the schools here. Dr. Ade speaking most encouragingly of plans outlined. He discussed with superintendent Snyder the general education policy, and the problems which arise through new legislation.

Dr. Kelley commented on the 100 per cent representation of Bristol schools in the State Education Association. He showed great interest in the teacher organization here, and its membership in the association he represents.

The two left by airplane early in the afternoon for Delaware County, where Dr. Ade had a speaking engagement.

The third guest of the day in Bristol public schools was Miss Ada Kugler, who represents the Bureau of Special Education, Harrisburg. She came to this borough to visit the two opportunity classes located here. After spending the entire day in the two rooms of the opportunity classes, Miss Kugler stated that progress here in that respect is rapidly approaching the place where Bristol will have the best two-room set-up of that type in the eastern part of the state.

RESOLUTION

The members of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department desire to place on record, their appreciation of the services of the late lamented Andrew Paglione, and their deep sense of his loss.

By the death of Mr. Paglione, September 23rd, this department is deprived of the services and active interest of one who has been a most faithful official of the department since its organization.

To the matters that fell to his duties in the office of captain of Ladder Co. No. 1, he gave that careful and earnest attention, that was so characteristic of him. His sterling qualities, which endeared him to all with whom he came in contact, causes his death to be felt by the members of the Department as a personal bereavement and they sympathize deeply with his family, to whom they offer their tenderest condolence, and earnestly invoke for them the support of higher consolation.

Resolved, That a copy of this minute be sent to the family and that it be published in the local paper.

CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON, President.

Dies of Bullet Wound

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—C. Morgan Knight, 28, socially prominent Philadelphia investment broker and amateur yachtsman, died today from a bullet wound inflicted by a gunman in the John Wanamaker department store Monday afternoon.

Knight was shot in the stomach while trying to stop a gunman's flight down a stairway of the midtown department store with $1240 he had stolen from the cashier's cage on the eighth floor.

Yanking his pistol from the holster, the bandit pressed it into Knight's side and fired.

As the broker slumped to the floor, the gunman continued his flight to the street where he was cornered by a patrolman near City Hall Annex, just around the corner from the department store. The prisoner identified himself as A. W. Gregg of Milwaukee, recently paroled from the penitentiary at Joliet, Ill.

TO BE EXPECTED

And speaking of taxes, we now hear that the department of agriculture is giving support to the proposal for additional imposts amounting to 200 millions a year to help defray the costs of Mr. Wallace's normal granary.

If this is true, it should not occasion surprise. The Administration's crop control program, which ranks as Item No. 1 on the agenda prepared for submission to the special session of Congress in November, is bound to cost a lot of money. And when the government wants money, it must find it either through borrowing or through taxes.

So there is talk of a revival in effect of the old processing taxes which were declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. A new way would be found of skinning the cat. The taxes would not be known as processing taxes but as equalizing taxes. The objection of the Supreme Court to processing taxes would be met by levying them in the form of excise taxes, the proceeds going directly into the treasury's general fund but not earmarked for the farmers. But just the same, they would provide the means for meeting the costs of crop control and its attached normal granary.

And to those who may be made to pay this huge amount for another experiment dangerously like one that once proved a failure in practice, the taxes will seem no less heavy under whatever name they are known.

CITY RUBES

Sophisticated city folk smile at the country folk, snicker who bets against the shell game.

But there's this to be said for him: He is fooled by the manipulation of three walnut shells and a veritable bean.

Also, the operator is miraculously deft; he could teach the shrewdest that, as he says, "the quickness of the hand deceives the eye."

But the suckers are not all from the sticks and do not all lose their money on the shell game.

City politicians for years have been trouncing the taxpayers without even giving them the fun of being puzzled as to how it is done. No shells, no elusive pea, no flickering hands or glib patter, just a stolid, routine affair of taking the taxpayers' money.

Having to give up his own way isn't what grips a married man. It's the realization that his wife's way is right.

People "get used to hardship" only in the sense that one more pain doesn't matter when you're hurting all over.

A free land is one where the people can't see movies condemning war because Europe won't buy that kind.

The final crown of misery when misfortune comes is remembering what a fool you were.

The Great Game of Politics

With only sixteen members in the Senate and eighty-eight in the House, lacking both a clearly defined direction and a basic policy, it is impossible to imagine a party more completely flattened. Yet it polled 17,000,000 votes last year and would have polled many millions more had its platform been less absurd and its appeal more sincere. In this situation any ordinary man would think that any movement to discover and frame intelligent reasons, however broad and general, for the continued existence of the party, would be supported by everyone with a stake in it—particularly as the idea happens to be the only one germinated within the party in a very long time.

INSTEAD, there is a more or less scattered, not very important, but nevertheless articulate antagonism, the purpose of which seems not to prevent a convention from being held but to minimize the chances of success when held. It is easy to understand this from Mr. Borah, who seems grossly incapable of being for anyone's idea but his own and whose record in the Black affair ought to induce a certain reluctance in him to talk at all for a while. And it is easy to understand in Congressman Hamilton Fish, who is the blatant type of bumbul-puppy "liberal" with a talent for doing the wrong thing in the worst way. But it is not easy to understand in others whose self-interest as well as common sense should make them enthusiastic for the plan.

SHIPPED of the disingenuous words with which they clothe their objections, the real reason appears to be that it was first suggested by Mr. Hoover. That seems silly but it is the fact. In a case such as this, one would suppose that the soundness of the idea, rather than the personality of the man who had it, was the vital thing. Yet here we find grown men who would rather stay flat on the ground, keep their party flat on the ground, and the country flat with it, than stand up and go along with a man whom they do not like—and don't like largely because they do not understand. This feeling of the small-bore Republican toward Mr. Hoover is one of the most curious things about present-day politics.

PARTLY, it is due to Mr. Hoover. Never a politician himself, he does not talk the language of politics nor get along very well with politicians. He has no gift at all for first-name calling nor for buttering newspaper men. His press conferences were dreadful affairs. Partly, it is due to the unfounded fear among the politicians that in some way the convention may make him the Presidential candidate again. It is certain that no words which Mr. Hoover could use would convince those who do not want to be convinced that he neither wants, will seek nor would accept a nomination in 1940, when he will be nearly 67 years old.

HOWEVER, most of the feeling against Mr. Hoover among Republican politicians of a certain sort is because they were boobish enough to swallow the "Smear Hoover" dope, financed by Mr. Raskob and fomented by Mr. Jonett Liberty League Shouse, from 1928 to 1933. It is not surprising that in a depression the appetite of the people for that sort of thing should be keen, but it is a little remarkable that politicians of one party should become infected by the propaganda of the other party. Yet the fact is, the prejudices created by the four years of consistent attack are responsible for the efforts to scuttle the convention proposal today, the theory being that it must be opposed if it came from Hoover—that, at all costs, Hoover must be kept from coming to the front. They have developed a very silly anti-Hoover complex. It is a childish exhibition, but is about what might be expected from some.

AND NOW an effort is being made to make it appear that Mr. Landau is opposed to the convention for fear it might reinstate Mr. Hoover as the party leader and sidetrack him. Nothing Mr. Landau has said or done justifies attributing to him this singularly small attitude. Nevertheless, it would be a fine thing if Mr. Landau, the titular party leader, could see his way to putting aside personal considerations and publicly joining with Mr. Hoover, the former titular leader, in a movement that at least holds some hope of revitalizing an opposition party. To most it will seem in the interests of the country as well as the party that they should work together in this direction, and that neither be nominated in 1940. Should the convention be a complete failure, the condition of the Republicans would be no worse than it is now. It can't be.

"Beauty's A Charm" by HARRIET HINSDALE

CHAPTER XIII

Preston's mood had already changed, the rare impulse toward frankness and self-revelation swept into oblivion. Knowing himself to be variable as the wind, mutable as water, he had for the moment desired this girl to see him as he was. But even if that were possible she would not understand. What a fool he was to make the attempt, merely through some obscure desire to play fair with her. It simply couldn't be done.

Well, enough of such Quixotic nonsense. She had turned her head again and was looking out to sea, eyes half closed so that the long lashes threw curving shadows on her cheeks. The beach coat had slipped back from her shoulders and he studied the pore, delicate line of throat and breast, the shape of her proud young head, the modeling of hands and feet and long, slim legs, as a sculptor might contemplate the marble figure he meant by some magic to imbue with life.

"Pygmalion and Galatea," he murmured, but she did not hear. A voice broke the stillness. "There they are. I thought we'd find them down here."

Pearl Carter appeared around the edge of the beach umbrella, followed by her husband. She smiled but it was a smile of the lips only, though her words were sweetly solicitous.

"Lucy Lee, you know I said you should be taking yourself a nice long nap this afternoon, honey. Remember, this is the big night and you must look your prettiest. Isn't that so, Mr. Preston?" She smiled down at the director, who was rather slowly and reluctantly rising to greet the newcomers. "We want her to win the Grand Prize, don't we?"

"Naturally, Mrs. Carter," Preston agreed.

"So you run right along back to the hotel now, Lucy Lee. Daddy Carter will go with you. Better hurry, honey. Juddy is upstairs alone and goodness only knows what mischief he may get into. I'll be up in just a few minutes and I'm sure Mr. Preston will see I get back safely."

Thus with one masterly stroke Pearl sent the two away and kept Neville Preston by her side. As she dropped to the beach cushions abandoned by Lucy Lee her glance swept appreciatively over the director's tall, bronzed figure. She indicated a cushion by her side.

"Do sit down again, Mr. Preston," she said softly. "There are such a lot of things I want to talk to you about. When I think of that Beautyquest Pageant tonight, I'm all nerves!"

"Why?" he asked with a touch of malice. "You're not going to be in it, are you?"

"No, of course not. It's Lucy Lee I'm worried about. I heard some people talking in the lobby, delegates to the Convention, and according to them, that 'Miss Parisian Toilettes' has a very good chance of winning. You've seen her around the lobby, haven't you, and in the Parisian Toilettes booth?"

"Yes, I believe I have noticed her," Preston replied.

"There's no denying that she's awfully pretty, though being a blonde myself maybe I ought not to say so."

Pearl's hand with its scarlet lacquered fingernails smoothed her regular blonde waves gently. Her tone was languishing, down to its lowest, most dulcet notes. Preston watched and listened, a mocking expression in his half-closed eyes; but he remained silent.

"I have been told," Pearl went on, "that I'm very much the Carole Lombard type." Still he made no reply. "Do you think so, Mr. Preston?"

"Ten pounds too heavy," he remarked judiciously, "and all of them in the wrong places. You'll have to get rid of the excess baggage before you can compete with Carole, I'm afraid. Also, you hair is all wrong."

He saw her lips tighten ominously. "Now don't get angry. You asked for it, and I'm only telling you for your own good."

"You should wear a simpler, less conventional coiffure—perhaps drawn back off your forehead with very little wave, if any. Shall I go on?"

"Why... yes," she hesitated. "I—I guess so."

"You've made up your mind to crash pictures, haven't you?" he went on. "You don't need to answer, because I know all the symptoms. And to ninety-nine out of a hundred women I'd say it was absolutely hopeless. But you've got what they lack."

It was amusing to see the thin line of her mouth soften and relax. "Oh, I don't mean beauty," he went on. "Hollywood is overrun with blondes who firmly believe they are the Harlow type or the Harding type or the Anita Louise type. And where do they get? Exactly nowhere! But I imagine you may be the exception, because you are luckily not burdened with silly scruples, or what some people so amusingly call conscience."

"Why, Mr. Preston?" Pearl protested, but not too forcibly.

"You know what you want and unless I'm mistaken, you won't hesitate at anything to accomplish it. Admirable traits, I assure you—in Hollywood! After watching you for the past few days I'm glad to have this little talk."

He opened a jeweled cigarette case and offered her one, then helped himself. Their glances met as he held the lighter for her. "It's been interesting to observe your maneuver in my direction, but I could have wished they had been a bit more subtle. You really must learn to be less obvious."

He blew perfumed smoke lazily skyward. "Yet there is a certain refreshing quality about you. Right now, you are trying to decide whether to pretend anger, hurt pride or merely lack of understanding. Why not be yourself for a change? You know perfectly well that what I'm saying is true. Now isn't it?"

"You've made up your mind to crash pictures, haven't you?" Preston asked.

Pearl's body relaxed. She leaned back against the piled cushions and a slow smile came over her face. Their glances met again and held for a long moment before she spoke. "Of course it is, but I think it's awfully clever of you to see through me, Mr. Preston."

"Why not call me Neville? I imagine that we're going to be pals, you and I." He laid a hand over one of hers and she made no move to withdraw it. "That's why I'm giving you sound advice. Ordinarily I wouldn't bother."

"Thanks," she said very softly. "Don't try to be a pretty doll, Pearl. You're decidedly not the type. You've got something infinitely more valuable than mere prettiness. There's a certain seductive quality—a vitality—which radiates from you. If that can be made to register on the screen as it does here on the Atlantic City sands you may make good, in a big way. Mind you, I'm not saying you will. But it's possible—providing you get the necessary breaks."

"I see. If I get the breaks."

Pearl's hand, upon which his was still lying, turned slowly until it lay palm upward against his palm, in close, throbbing proximity. Once more their glances locked and held for a long moment of intimate revelation, before Pearl smilingly rose to her feet and together they walked slowly back to the hotel.

Big Enough to Do the Job

... but not too big to be friendly

"Make to our order FIVE MILLION telephone calls! Make them clear, fast and accurate!"

That's the big order we get every day from Pennsylvania's telephone users.

To handle this great volume of calls is a tremendous job. It requires the services of over 7,000 men and 10,000 women... and more than 317 million dollars worth of plant and equipment.

This organization must be big to provide the fast, accurate, high-quality telephone service that Pennsylvania demands. But we are not too big to be friendly neighbors. Not too big nor too busy to greet you with a smile... to serve you with courtesy and consideration... to help you locate a doctor in a hurry... or to lend a helping hand whenever you need some special telephone service. To us, telephone users are people—not just telephone numbers.

Use your telephone more—to keep in touch with family and friends... to speed your business affairs... to get things done quickly and easily, anywhere.

Government economists estimate that this year's pear crop was one quarter larger than the average for the last five years and 13 percent above last year. September saw a bumper California crop of pink-cheeked Bartlett pears moving into the market, after which supplies began coming in from Michigan and New York State. Since Bartlett pears do not last long after they ripen, they are picked green and kept in scientifically controlled temperatures until they reach the retailer. The housewife can be guided in her purchase of pears by choosing those marked "U. S. 1," or "U. S. Fancy."

Silk dresses are said to last longer if they are hung in a cool closet. Furs

Reject Another Load of Taxes

Patterning itself after a National Government which has increased taxes to the limit of endurance, and whose spendthrift policies have piled up a bankrupting Federal debt, the Administration at Harrisburg is now asking for the same powers to further exploit the people of this State.

Two years ago the voters of Pennsylvania turned down a proposed Constitutional Convention, by a majority of more than a quarter of a million votes.

The Earle Administration seeks to accomplish those very same purposes now, through proposed Amendments that will appear on your ballot in the Election, November 2nd.

TAX GRABS AND RIPPER LEGISLATION ARE THE ESSENCE OF THESE PROPOSALS

Having practically doubled the taxes in this State within the three years they have been in power, they now ask the right to borrow $42,000,000, and for an Income Tax which is not "ear-marked" and hence could be spent for anything—which would add millions upon millions to the swollen tax load in this State, and reach to practically every family in the Commonwealth.

EVEN IF YOU ARE NOT A DIRECT TAX-PAYER, YOU ARE NOW PAYING A MULTITUDE OF CONCEALED AND INDIRECT TAXES. DO YOU WANT AN INCOME TAX, AS WELL AS A GRADUATED PROPERTY TAX, ADDED TO YOUR PRESENT BURDENS? ARE YOU READY TO FINANCE A FURTHER EXPANSION OF THEIR LONG SPENDING SPREE?

Preserve the Constitution of Pennsylvania against their assault. Protect yourself against an unparalleled tax grab. Prevent this Administration from accomplishing by Constitutional Ripper what it was halted in doing by Legislative Ripper.

TWO YOUNG WRESTLERS TO VIE IN FEATURE EVENT

TRENTON, Oct. 27.—Two of the classiest of the younger crop of wrestlers will vie in the feature event at the Trenton Arena tonight in Promoter Johnny Ipp's first five-match card.

The lads in question are Karl Davis, huge and berserk Southern mat villain, and "Irish" Jack Kennedy, powerful youngster, who bids fair to become the outstanding favorite of Arena fandom.

Both men came through with dazzling victories on the last card. Davis downed Wally Dusek, in a slugging brawl, in two straight falls, and Kennedy ended the hopes of burly Jake Patterson to regain windup heights again. Kennedy battered the huge Patterson into submission in one of the greatest matches ever staged here.

Kennedy and Davis are powerful and rugged grapplers who can stand plenty of wear and tear. They both believe in the aggressive new school of slambang wrestling and the fans will be in for a treat when these two behemoths tangle.

The four bouts that complete the program are in keeping with the action-filled windup. The semi-feature will bring together Rebel Rob Russell, mat villain deluxe, who conquered Mayes McLain last week. He faces stern opposition in Al Mercier, classy French Canadian and one of the most popular wrestlers ever to appear here.

Hans Steinke, the German Oak, and one of the greatest wrestlers in the world, will appear in a special bout opposed to Leo Hyatt.

Gafoot Khan, turbaned Hindustan, will vie with Andy Meixner, Scranton coal miner and a rowdy grappler from start to finish.

Handsome Jack Holland, Ipp's newest importation from California, a recent conqueror of Rudy Dusek, will face Jimmy Kilonis, flashy Greek warrior.

The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m.

American League Aces of '37

By BURNLEY

Looking over the final baseball statistics for 1937, we find that Charley Gehring of Detroit is the American League batting king, and Johnny Allen of Cleveland tops the moundmen in won and lost percentage.

Topping both leagues in home runs is the young man who undoubtedly ranks as the standout ball player of 1937—Joe DiMaggio of the Yanks.

In this story we consider the achievements of the American Leaguers only. After what happened to the Giants in the World Series, and the Cubs (as usual) in the Chicago city series, maybe the National League should be "included out" of the major circuits, anyhow.

Everyone was happy to see the brilliant Charley Gehring finally come into his own as batting champion. The Gray Ghost of Detroit, one of the greatest players of this or any other day, is so unobtrusive and mechanically efficient that he never receives the attention he deserves. Winning the hitting laurels serves to focus the spotlight on one of the real all-time greats.

Allen, the pitching leader, came within a whisker of equalling the American League mound mark of 16 straight wins. It took a 1-to-0 setback in his final start of the year to mar Johnny's perfect record.

Of DiMaggio, so much has already been written that it would be gilding the lily for me to add any more words of praise. Suffice it to say that even his fellow ball players speak of him with awe. The boy has everything—he's "colossal," to borrow a famous Darrante expression.

is now a member of Borough Council's health, sanitation and poor committee, and the municipal water supply committee.

Born at McKinley, Pa., near Ogontz, December 3, 1895, son of the late Mahlon and Ellen T. Vandegrift, Evan B. Vandegrift came to Bristol with his parents 33 years ago, when he was nine years of age. He was educated in the schools here, after which he engaged in the practice of the wheel-right business with his father, on Otter street.

Mr. Vandegrift, who is engaged in automobile selling, is a well-known musician in this vicinity, and has conducted a number of orchestras.

He is a past junior vice-commander of Robert W. Bracken Post 382, American Legion, and is associated in the management of the American Legion Cadets. Mr. Vandegrift is also a member of the Bristol Lodge of Elks.

the best men in whom to entrust the Borough's affairs are those who, through years of experience, have proved their merit and ability to safeguard the taxpayers' interests in the management of the municipal government.

If the municipal affairs are to continue to operate upon the present high standard of efficiency, if the taxpayers' interests are to be protected, if taxes are not to be increased, then able and experienced men must be placed in office and none can be more qualified than those who have given years of their lives in the service of the community.

The Burgess and many of the Councilmen who are running for re-election have had years of experience in Borough Council. That they have shown unusual ability in the management of the Borough's affairs during the trying years of the depression cannot be gainsaid. Their outlook into the future, with its great possibilities for the extension and enlargement of the Borough's usefulness, exhibits a clear discernment of the future's needs.

What are the voters of Bristol going to do about the matter when on Tuesday, November 2nd, they exercise their rights of franchise and elect to office men who shall be responsible for the town's welfare during the next four years?

Shall they elect men who have been in service for a number of years, who by their ability have proven themselves worthy of the continued confidence and respect of the electorate, or shall they elect men of no experience, men who have not proven that they are qualified for the positions, men whose only claim is a personal ambition for political preferment, or a desire to show their political power?

So much is at stake in the coming election, that every thoughtful citizen should give serious and sober thought to the selection of the candidates whom they will support.

The Republican Party presents to the voters of Bristol a group of candidates for the various Borough offices, nearly all of whom have shown their merit through years of activity in the Borough government. May the paraphrased words of Webster find a local application in the coming election: "A true friend of the Borough, one who wants her affairs administered in an able and economical manner, will show his love for the Borough's friends and benefactors by esteeming it a privilege to commend them for the good they have already done and to show their appreciation of the services they have rendered, by retaining them in office at the coming election."

Potato Crop Good In Bucks County

the county harvested at least 400 bushels to the acre.

Referring to the potato prices, Mr. Bishop said this week that there is a slight upward trend. The market is somewhat better and the demand is stronger, this being due to the arrival of cool weather.

Growers who have been grading their potatoes have been receiving a slightly better price than those who did not grade them. The new marketing law, said Mr. Bishop, has been followed out by quite a number of growers and as a result they have been receiving better prices. Those who have been marketing their potatoes U. S. No. 1 have been receiving better prices than those who have not followed this plan. On the wholesale scale the potatoes have been selling from 60 to 75 cents a bushel.
